HOW I SUFFERED.

Seventeen years from a Skin Disease. Could not walk or dress myself. A mass of disease from head to foot. Curled up like a ball when by the Cuttings' Hospital.

At that time I was a poor boy, and my words proved to be useless or all the time made no impression on my tutor. A physician was called, but he could not cure me. I was given various medicines, but the sores spread to my ears, nose, and mouth. I was given various ointments, but they did not help me. I was given various powders, but they did not help me. An Attempt to Bluff the Umatilla Reservation Indians.

A DECISION AGAINST THE CHURCH

Jesus Escapes the Gallows—A Little Girl Crashed to Death—Ex-Senator Slater Better—Mail Breaks Through—Etc.

PENDLETON, March 7.—Colonel J. C. Stedman, department inspector who has been engaged for some weeks past in the work of straightening out the tangled condition of affairs on the Umatilla Indian Reservation in the interior of the state, has issued a decree in order to enforce the department regulations covering the reservation.

The object of the application for troops is to show not only to the obstreperous Indians of the reservation that they must conform to the regulations of the department, but also to the large number of Indians who have been sold slaves or contracts, from the Indians to occupy lands in direct violation of the law. There appears to be fully 100 of this class, mostly of French extraction, who have been sold into slavery all over the state, until now they occupy about all the land upon the reservations fitted for agricultural purposes. These squatters have been most unkindly treated by their leaders, they are not allowed to keep the orders, and, in enforcing their going, it is proposed to accelerate their movements at the point of departure.

It has not yet learned whether the request has been complied with by the authorities at Washington or not. Inspector Saenger being now in Portland.

TERRITORIAL SUPREME COURT

Decision Against the Catholic Church in an Important Case.

OMAHA, W. T. March 7.—In the supreme court to-day, in the case of the Catholic Bishop of Nianguay vs. the United States, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

The court decides that the act of congress granting 640 acres of land to missionary societies, who were in possession of the said land, was unconstitutional, and that only Indians, American citizens, refers to and only includes American citizens. Plaintiff in this case did not occupy the land himself, but had been occupied by the Indians. Consequently, he had no right to sue.

The new sheriff is greatly embarrassed by the situation, and has demanded another set of books and placed the matter in the hands of the prosecuting attorney to determine what to do.

A member of the late sheriff's stroke considerable adverse comment, as his actions are without precedent and an warrant by statute or law. The new sheriff is the sole representative of the county, and a part of the county record.

The wife of Engineer Farlow, of the O. R. & N., for a long time ill, is at the point of death.

Captain P. Johnson arrived home this evening from Washington.

Edward Nelson, boy living at Pendleton has been suffering from a long illness, and is now confined to his bed.

Five were taken alive from erupting of well-like formations on his head.

They resemble worms some times in size and it is supposed to be the newly developed plan to conduct religious services on its premises. Plaintiff does not claim that he acted under any law of the United States, but under the bishop of Quince, a British subject. Hence, not having occupied it himself on August 14, 1848 and the grant does not lie. And even if he had occupied it, he had no right to it, and he had no right to plaintiff, as he was acting in behalf of a foreign corporation. The petition for rehearing is granted.

Supreme Court Proceedings—Incorporation of the Bank for Agriculture and Commerce.

Salem, O. March 7.—Supreme court W. A. McCarty, res p. J. R. Winsor, app. on motion of the attorney of the respondent, the case was affirmed. Opinion per curiam.

W. H. Hall, res p. S. B. Zeller, app. app.

from Multnomah argued and submitted E. H. Watson for appellant Newton McCoy for respondent.

The cause was argued in the court of appeals at Portland on March 1, 1888.

The court decided that the man contractor and laborers on the project were entitled to the same amount of compensation as the man contractor has been paid in full by the owner.

In the cases of Marsh vs. Wade and

Daues vs. the Northern Pacific, the suits were denied.

In the case of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company vs. Whalen the motion for an appeal to the supreme court of the United States was granted.

The suit of Bell vs. the Pomeroy Improvement Company, appellants have thirty days in which to file a motion for a reheating.

GODAS ESCAPES THE GALLows

The Governor of Montana Commutes His Sentence to Life Imprisonment.

HELENA, Mont. March 7.—Governor Leslie commuted the sentence of Godas, the half-breed murderer, to day and affixed the penitentiary at Missoula.

No arrangement had been made for the execution of the gallows, the same one upon which Hart was hanged, having been erected.

It was a surprise to the general public and the friends of the dead of a desire to comment in regard to his action.

Several prominent ladies of Helena took the matter in hand and circulated a petition in opposition to his hanging. Almost every citizen who knew him either favored the execution or not.

Godas was smoking a cigar when the sheriff read the general's reprieve to him.

He said, "I am the son of another and as soon as being as to go to the pententiary for life. If I been hung my father

he kill himself. Better go penitentiary

He was innocent and good and showed no signs of planned or systematic

Before the fact of the reprieve had been made public the salvation army expressed a desire to sing and pray with Godas, but he refused the offer with a show of displeasure

A Child Crucified to Death—The Chamber of Commerce—Etc.

TACOMA, March 7.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon one of the workmen engaged on the lots building on G street near Twelfth, discovered the dead body of a girl com- plained of having been molested on her while playing. The child proved to be Kelly Evans, daughter of a family who arrived only last week from Minneapolis, who were staying about a month. The girl was found hanging from a tree in a lot on G street, with a nail through her neck.

The body was removed to the hospital.

AN INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCE.

Neil Dow, father of prohibition, publishes in the last issue a prohibition organ of the country. The voice of the people, the Lawyer from Portland. Mr. Dow's position, he declares, is "thoroughly effective when enforced," and he thinks it could be enforced, but confesses it isn't. He says:

"There is no effective enforcement of the law here, though protemde attempts are occasionally made in that direction, but nothing is done here to reduce the number of low, dirty, vile houses which inflict a vast misery upon our people."

We take it, therefore, that the people don't want the law enforced. This, undoubtedly, is the fact, or it would be enforced. Why people take note of this fact, and hence do not waste time and energy in a futile, foolish, and harassing effort. But General Dow goes on thus:

"I am sorry to say that the churches here are as much coming from the liquor trade. I had almost said they alone are responsible for it, but in fact, all the Sabbath breakers, blasphemers, gamblers, keepers of brothels, all the rogues, ruffians, and scoundrels who make up the underworld here will be found to have got their start in the liquor trade."

Iowa, if not a sovereign, neutral state, insists that the state of matrimony shall be entered with due decorum and according to established forms. Backed by the authority of the commonwealth, the citizens of the village where the spiritual marriage took place decided that the angels, while well enough in their places, were not competent witnesses to contracts between mortals, and that a crank's promise to "love, honor and protect" must be made before recognized authority in order to give it weight at all.

Probably there is exaggeration here, but some part of the statement, no doubt, is true. The truth there is in simply conveys the lesson that prohibition, by setting up a safe standard of conduct and morals, has deeply corrupted the people, made them dissolute and hypocrites, undermined the foundations of morality in private and public life, and debt thereby a great blow to religion and society. That is the moral result of the operation of modern, honest, and fearless prohibition. The result could not, indeed, be anything else. Of the militant philosophy of prohibition there could be no stronger indictment than that formulated in this letter by General Dow. It is all the more striking from his total want of consciousness of the cause of the corruption and degeneration he depicts.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

The return of two democrats from West Virginia to the Fifty-first congress will leave the republicans only a narrow majority of three, which is not enough to prevent filibustering, but any majority affords opportunity to examine contested cases, and that will mean enough democrats, fraudulently claiming election, and admit enough republicans, with the advent of new members from the recently admitted territories to make a deadlock working majority in both houses.

If the senate has only one vote to exploit upon, and the house only three, the administration of the two Dakotas, Montana and Washington, if they all go republican, will give the senate nine republican majority and the house seven. The "Tenth" suggested by General Dow is all the more striking from the cause of the corruption and degeneration he depicts.

BLAINE'S HAND.

The composition of the cabinet and the names suggested for foreign appointments bear marks of Blaine's hand. While Rawell, named for the English mission, never would be thought of in that connection save for the fact that he had been for a dozen years Blaine's man in the American church. He was, however, Blaine's Blaine, James G. Blaine, "as incessantly as Blitzen," in the ear of Henry the Fourth.

The appointment of John A. Kasson to represent the United States at Berlin in the Sanborn conference is another Blaine performance. Kasson has always been one of Blaine's lieutenants. No objection can be made to this appointment, however, because Kasson has much superior talent and position to qualify him to represent the church closely over those admissions of republican consistency. Then they have a new administration in sight, from whom they expect much and to whom they will be kind.

These new states will bring positive strength to the party to which they owe it that justice has finally been done them, and there will be rejoicing throughout the farthest West because there is strength added to its forces. The popular party returns to the scenes as the New York "with a clean bill of health," and is better entitled to confidence than ever before in its career, because the investigation of its opponents has confirmed its claim for frank and honest management.

There will be busy times throughout the newly created states, as they have constitutions to frame and officers to elect. Our troubles in that line are small in proportion, and we may look forward to a quiet year to build. It will be entertaining and amusing, as well, to watch the movements going on among our newly enfranchised neighbors.

SYMPATHY EXPENSE.

Certain landlords seem to be impressed with the idea that the city is in some way responsible for the annoying fact that some of their tenants have had the smallpox, thereby rendering their premises undesirable places of residence until renovated, and that it is duty of the municipality to replace the infected with decent, decently-constructed dwellings.

This is a very bad idea. The landlord's demand seems to be that every one, directly or indirectly connected with the late visitation of smallpox is trying to get his hand into the city's strong box and reimburse himself for his misfortune. There is no more reason why the city should clean up a man's house after the smallpox, than after scarlet fever, diphtheria or any other dreaded scourge. In taking off his garments, or carrying them until they recover, and notifying the city for such notification, the city has disgraced its whole duty in the matter. It's care for the public, and for those unable, through poverty or misfortune to take care of themselves without infecting others. This landlord has been disengaged in a economical manner by this city--within a few months past--yet, presuming upon the general knowledge of individuals, have come to the conclusion that all cases of smallpox, come by funeral trainings for those who died of smallpox, and have started a new business.

Baldor, private secretary to the president, is described as a slender man of medium height, with a thin mustache, and a habitual expression of weary, firm-set gravity. If he said further, that he had not been educated for a pedagogue, a bank cashier, an editor, or a student," and that he "dresses quietly, wears glasses, and has a firm way of carrying himself and a hesitating way of speaking." His last quality will make him invaluable in the position he occupies between the president and the public, if he only "he-says" long enough. The urban and sagacious old gentleman declared that he got all the benefit of the situation during his four years' term, though it is not likely that he would have entered on a second four years with clarity and cheerfulness had his party come to his chief.

PORTLAND, FRIDAY, MARCH 8.

OFFICE-SEEKING.

A letter from Washington tells us that the writer visited the Oregonians and our representative, and found them all busy answering questions of all kinds of applications for offices in this state. There are a few positions that are worth having, but not one that any man can afford to seek his own affairs to accept. If he has any work in the world to do office-holding entails many expenses and many annoyances that the office-seeker has little idea of. In every place there is a serious responsibility involved, and the incumbent sometimes becomes a burden to his householders. It is not all gain and play that there are responsible duties to be done, and to be an office-holder is an encumbrance in a business way that all do not possess.

The office-seeker is inhuman, in all its aspects. The man who succeeds usually looks back with regret to his inhumanity as so much time and life was wasted. For a young man to want office is too often a curse to be cause as a usual thing as in a pool of good will can be better in ordinary business than drawing a salary from a position that is certain in tenure. If he enters office at 21 and remains four years, he will be 25 and he has learned will not help him in ordinary business, unless he has saved capital to start with, which few office-holders have. So much for more office holding and its value to any ordinary man, now let us see the other side.

"Lish" Applegate, many years ago, dropped down the house in an exciting case by saying, "unfortunately for the American people there are not others enough to go round," a fact a person has been since then personally aware of. There are only a few offices in the state and henceforth our senators will no longer be managing offices outside of Oregon. While this is true—that there are few offices—this writer quoted above says the separate and all of the three congressmen from Oregon come up to a hundred letters a day to each one, that goes on for a week or two, a week or two they will be looking at making any satisfactory division. Not one man in a score of more than a hundred, can be satisfied and there will be disappointment in proportion. It being evident that so many will be left out in the cold, why should any sensible man who cannot bring irrefragable claims to bear for distasteful service rendered, allow himself to be one among so many?

Office-seeking has become an evil, a vice among us, and that is why good men unanimously desire the civil service reform kept up. Some claim that it cannot be sustained, but it must be to purify sections and make the healthy in politics. Reaching the top of an office to be filled by appointment, by making subordinate positions permanent, or on good behavior, will remove a demoralizing cause and aid to purify politics in a great measure. The lust for office is unworthy any able man, for the world has far better prizes for capable men. The man who becomes a chronic office-seeker tacitly owns that he is not capable of commanding success otherwise.

Office should seek the man and not man seek an office. The only true conception of free government is that previous efforts should be given to the office, to office, that the intelligence of the respective parties should designate disinterested men to fill important positions, but that idea partakes of an insanity in worldly affairs that may be beyond all hope.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Captain Ben Richardson, of Harrison, N. Y., a son of a son he bought to George Washington is dead. He was a 49er. Every fourth of July, and on Washington's birthday Captain Ben would be seen on the streets of Harrison in the automobile.

An exchange says the robes made in Washington & C. Garrison of Brooklyn Falls, Mr. Garrison's career has been a glorious one, always an inspiring blower, and as a general speaker he is unequalled. His eloquence is perfect in form and so even the Unites States require election of the best to insure good results. Garrison of course is the principal man, but he has not yet come to the public eye in quality, cool enough for a glass. We often hear the Boston Society referred to as the most patriotic in quality of Am. rank. It is plain to me that the Boston Society has probably lagged in some respects, but I am not sure. But I am sure that the Baldwin and Garrison are the best and the best in the country.

Another very valuable winter apple of Baldwin well grown and well ripened.

Massachusetts' apple is said to be the best, and so good a keeper, the Baldwin, and though often called a large apple, it requires good soil and treatment to do justice to itself in this particular. As usually seen, it is not as large as the Baldwin, nor is it as sweet, but since it is a winter apple, it is probably larger in size, makes the end of the end of the Baldwin, but the Baldwin after a long time little difference in taste or flavor.

This is a good fruit, but his wings are smaller in proportion to his body than the Baldwin, and often called a large apple, it requires good soil and treatment to do justice to itself in this particular.

The Baldwin is a winter apple.
